

PAUL & ANDREA

Luxury Travel Designer

Today, luxury is a state of mind. It is a true experience, made up of little acts, both ritual and personal. It's also the chance to take back your time, and dedicate it to doing what you love most.

For this reason, every trip undertaken must be made to measure, taking your tastes and personal routines into account.

Paul and Andrea know this well, because while they are trip managers, they are first and foremost lovers of travel, good food, and beauty. It's their passion that drives everything.

"Traveling in Italy with Luxo Italia means traveling with locals, who love this country. We, ourselves, are travelers, always looking for new places to discover and share. We make our experience and knowledge of the territory available to help you create a completely personalized tour, and capture the essence of Italy."

Worldly, perfectionist, practical. Paul is Italian on his mother's side and English on his father's. From his mother, he inherited a love for high level gastronomy, from his father, his practicality and precision. From both, he got his multicultural, eclectic spirit for exploration. After a trip to the USA at just 8 years old, he knew he was destined to be a globetrotter.

Today, as his grandmother says, "he flies more than he walks." An expert on Michelin star restaurants and a connoisseur of fine wines, he spends his free time being creative in the kitchen, possibly sipping a nice glass of Amarone. He loves to plan adventurous trips, for himself, but especially for others. This is why he has decided to dedicate himself to LuxoItalia full-time, along with his friend and business partner, Andrea.

Paul Lewis

Empathetic, versatile, meticulous. Andrea's deepest passion is for traveling. A lover of good wine and the multifaceted Italian cuisine, he's Italian born and raised. After he gained a substantial amount of experience in the hotels sector, he decided to leave his office job and dedicate his time and energy to doing something he loved more: working with people. His extraordinary empathy, combined with his deep-rooted knowledge of the land allows him to plan the perfect trip for each individual, with skill and precision.
